The Center for Integrative Leadership is administered jointly by the University of Minnesota’s Carlson School of Management and the Humphrey School of Public Affairs.

Center for Integrative Leadership
130 Humphrey School of Public Affairs
301 19th Avenue South
Minneapolis, MN 55455
612.625.5209
www.leadership.umn.edu
Dedicated to the study, teaching, and deployment of integrative leadership.
Overview
The Center for Integrative Leadership (CIL) is dedicated to examining and advancing a new vision for cross-sector leadership that will be highly effective at tackling the challenging issues of our time.

CIL is a premier forum for the study of leadership that crosses sectoral and geographic boundaries. This work results in initiatives that, coupled with community engagement, apply integrative leadership in practical, effective ways. We engage in collaborative teaching, community outreach, and research initiatives with other University centers, and external community partners. We believe that the practice of integrative leadership has the greatest potential to advance the common good.

Leadership to Advance the Common Good
The Center convenes thought leaders and practitioners from diverse disciplines to propose new models and methods for dealing with such complex issues as food safety and security, environmental protection, healthcare, public education, free trade, and sustainable community economic development.

Become Involved
The CIL welcomes executives, professionals, government officials, community leaders, faculty, alumni, and students. We invite you to participate in our initiatives, advance and share your knowledge, be supported or support our work. Visit our web site: www.leadership.umn.edu

Leaders must integrate knowledge and talent from individuals across the private, not-for-profit and government sectors if we are to advance the common good in the 21st century.
Mission
The Center for Integrative Leadership’s mission is to discover and disseminate transformative knowledge about the nature and practice of leadership across business, government, and civil society sectors to address challenges and advance the common good.

The Center for Integrative Leadership offers:

• Research forums and peer-reviewed research awards to deepen our understanding of integrative leadership theory and practice.

• Symposia bringing together top U.S. and international scholars, practitioners and public policymakers to discuss and debate cross-sector leadership issues.

• Bi-annual International Integrative Leadership Conference.

• Student-led co-curricular initiatives supporting the development of integrative leaders.

• Integrative leadership coursework and graduate-level integrative leadership minor degree program.

• Development of curriculum and instructional materials to advance the teaching of integrative leadership.

• Executive Leadership Fellows program and training for professional audiences.